I. Welcome & call to order

II. Review and approval of agenda

III. Overview of 2021 legislation impacting CRB

- Dayvon Love – The bill creates Administrative Charging Committees (reviews PIB investigation and decides if officers will be charged) and Police Accountability Board will hold quarterly meetings with leadership, accepts citizen complaints, and must be representative of the community, PAB nominates certain members of the ACC and Trial Boards
- Yanet Amanuel – The scope of allegations enlarges, no limitation any more; ACC decides discipline, Commissioner can go higher, but not lower
- 1) Dissolve the existing the CRB, repeal the 1999 statute and borrow infrastructure from existing CRB to create the statutorily required elements of the PAB's.
- 2) Legislate a carve out for Baltimore city that keeps the CRB structure in place and provides the powers assigned to the PAB's to the CRB (ie.: appointing people to the administrative charging committees).

VI. Discussion of CRB's options in regard to interpreting the legislation

- Dayvon Love - 1) dissolve CRB and carry over some CRB functions into the new board; 2) do a carve out that would give PAB and disciplinary authority to the CRB, this one might be more practicable. Legislature is expecting some clean-up legislation for HB 670, so this could be part of it. How do we operationalize the authority of PAB into the CRB structure; so CRB would appoint 2 members of the ACC. Mechanics around investigations and role of ACC and CRB would be something to work out, some reconciliation around that. The CRB has to figure that out. #2 is the most intuitive and least labor intensive option.
- Yanet Amanuel – PAB has to issue quarterly reports showing trends in policing
- Dayvon Love – Look at intersection of Anton's Law and HB 670 to see how much/what information can be made public; CRB should take the lead in deciding how HB670 will be reconciled
- Yanet Amanuel – CRB has a better way of deciding who is on the PAB, we have a member from each district.

6:00-8:00 pm

- Dayvon Love – Look at PAB and see how the CRB can operationalize the PAB’s powers and then they will help us create legislation, Del. Stephanie Smith’s (Head of Baltimore City Delegation) hearing is 11/16/21 and we should have a proposal by then; will have to submit something ahead of time before the hearing.
- Dana Moore – Combine PAB and CRB, hybrid, and be a model for the state and our citizens can be proud of and serve them as best we can.
- Amy Cruice – Data and stories about why we need our own investigators (such as, when we come out with different determinations) in Baltimore we can’t rely only on PIB.
- Caylin Young – We might want to include as many people/stake holders are possible who want to be involved with this process.
